Qualifications:

I have tutored hundreds of students and worked for various news organizations in writing and editing positions for years. I am a UNF alumna, having graduated cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts in English and a minor in Mass Communication. Before that, I graduated with honors from the Creative Writing program at Douglas Anderson School of the Arts. I hold various certifications in counseling as well as leadership, all of which have contributed to my tutoring style. Both my writing and editing have been recognized by the National Collegiate Press Association. I was invited to join the Academic Integrity Forum, and I have traveled around the state and country for various writing and journalism conventions. I am proficient in AP, MLA and APA styles.

Writing Services:

I write documents in a clear, complete, concise, correct and professional manner, delivering quality content for both print and online platforms.*

Editing Services:

I edit documents for clarity, totality, brevity, grammar, tone and style, addressing the specific needs of the provided piece, whether it is literary, academic, and/or creative in nature.

Tutoring Services:

The number one skill today's job candidates lack is communication. I teach techniques for speaking and writing as well as techniques for revision that can be used again and again. If you hate writing, I will show you why it is loved by so many and respected in every field of study and work. Appointments usually take an hour but may be longer if the student's piece is lengthy or complex.

*Disclaimer: My writing services are not available to you if you have entered into an academic agreement of integrity or any similar contract of ethics. However, you are more than welcome to request my editing and tutoring services, which do not violate any ethical agreements; they only support the betterment of original pieces of writing.
